USA3000 Airlines Expands Service to Tampa Bay!

Philadelphia – February 2, 2009

USA3000 Airlines has announced the company will resume service to St. Petersburg-Clearwater International Airport from Cleveland Hopkins International Airport and St. Louis Lambert International Airport.

Service to/from St. Petersburg-Clearwater resumes on May 1st to both Cleveland and St. Louis destinations and is available for booking immediately.

USA3000 ceased service from these destinations in August 2008 when fuel costs reached record levels. USA3000 will continue its Chicago (O'Hare International Airport) to St. Petersburg-Clearwater International Airport route through April, which was resumed in late December.

High customer demand for these routes was a key factor in the company's decision to resume service.

"We are delighted that USA3000 and our Airport continue to help support tourism in the Tampa Bay area during these difficult economic times." said Noah Lagos, Airport Director for the St. Petersburg-Clearwater International Airport.

In celebration of its resumed service, USA3000 Airlines is offering low fares plus special discount promo codes for all of the company's flights to Florida. The promo code NOW is worth 20% off all flights to and from Florida now through February 8th. Late spring travelers should take note of the promo code MAY, which offers a discount of 10% for all Florida flights in May. Customers can book reservations today at USA3000's web site, www.usa3000.com
